Stepping Up 2009-2010

From the Co-Directors...

A huge thank-you to all who partnered financially with CPT this past year! You are wonderful! Together with effective work by CPTers economizing on expenses, your contributions have taken CPT beyond recovery from the unprecedented drop in giving the previous year. This strong support in a year still so difficult in the world economy encourages us greatly.

Last year's increase in individual donations was particularly inspiring, especially in light of significantly diminished congregational giving and grants. In addition, CPTers and supporters extended no-interest loans that will enable us to spread out the expenses related to the needed purchase and initial renovation of an office and training center in the near southwest side of Chicago ($154,000).

This puts a firm financial footing under all of CPT's current projects – Aboriginal Justice, Colombia, Iraq and Palestine.

It allows us to continue strongly on the trajectory of growth in dismantling racism and other oppressions.

We have openings for new full-time CPTers on every project and are supporting peacemakers better than ever before. We would like to do more.

In 2005 and 2006 CPT experienced a substantial blessing in one-time giving. CPT opted to invest these funds over several years in strengthening personnel support and undoing oppressions, deepening projects in areas where we already had teams, and expanding program work in the Great Lakes region of Africa, and the Philippines. With the drop in CPT income in 2008, we had to suspend work in those new areas of expansion.

But the invitations to partner for peace in these places, and many others, are still there. We can only renew this work if giving increases to a level that will fund them over the long haul.

What would it take for you to step up your donations to CPT by 10% or 20% or more? Is this the year for you and us to take the next step together in moving CPT to a deeper, sustainable level of peacemaking?

Doug Pritchard and Carol Rose
CPT Co-Directors

Undoing Racism

CPT began FYE 2010 with strategic planning meetings based on the previous year's racism audit. We have grounded our work in these Strategic Directions for shaping an anti-racist identity for CPT:

1. Resourcing the well-being of CPT and its members;
2. Cultivating a CPT culture that is anti-racist, anti-oppressive, and anti-colonial;
3. Articulating and sharing a transformed mission for CPT;
4. Honoring the voices of our partners throughout CPT communication vehicles;
5. Widening ownership of CPT;
6. Empowering CPTers through clear, accountable processes of decision making and leadership;
7. Making all of CPT accountable to our partners in an open and transparent way.

Delegations

Short-term delegations of 7-14 days link communities resisting violence with concerned individuals, churches and groups, offering participants a first-hand experience of the transformative power of Gospel nonviolence.

Delegations serve as a primary mechanism for persons interested in active peacemaking and human rights to participate directly in CPT's violence-reduction ministry. Often delegations can ask questions, visit certain officials, or test new avenues of non-violence in ways that support local partners and strengthen the work of ongoing teams. In FYE 2010, 125 people participated in 14 CPT delegations.

CPT delegation to Colombia.

Colombia

CPT partners with communities facing threats to their land, livelihood and cultural identity in the Central Magdalena valley of north-central Colombia.

Team members support grass-roots initiatives to expose and transform structures of domination and oppression through active nonviolence in order to make possible a world grounded in respect, justice and love.

- artisan miners
- social organizations
- displaced persons
- indigenous communities
- conscientious objectors

"They don't

Grandfathers

Grandmothers.
We are not
going away...
We are not
giving up."

Wabigoon First Nation

Danny Beaton, Mohawk, Turtle Clan, an activist, musician and film maker, plays his flute at Gate 3, Dumpsite 41 – part of a nonviolent encampment and blockade led by Beausoleil First Nation women (Keepers of the Water) to prevent the Ontario government from building a garbage dump over a pristine aquifer. Some water protectors were arrested before officials declared a moratorium on further development at the site.

CPTers Margaret Sumadh (back left) and Christine Klassen (back right) accompany Grassy Narrows First Nation members on a prayer walk through the streets of Kenora to end racism.

CPT responds to invitations from First Nations communities who face industrial activity in their territories without their consent. CPT supports First Nations communities seeking political resolutions through agreements which are acceptable to them, and works to reduce violence directed against First Nations people as they struggle for justice and self-determination.

Palestine

Palestinian woman weeps over one of 20 olive trees destroyed by Israeli settlers near the village of at-Tuwani.

CPT-Palestine seeks to support Palestinian-led, nonviolent, grassroots resistance to the Israeli occupation and the unjust structures that uphold it.

In FYE 2010, CPT re-opened a project in al-Khalil/Hebron (closed for 8 months during a refocusing process) and continued work in the South Hebron Hills village of at-Tuwani.

Team members accompany children braving threats on their way to school, subsistence farmers and shepherds determined to harvest their crops and graze their flocks in the face of settler harassment, and communities nonviolently resisting land confiscation and home demolition.

School children walking from Tuba and Maghayir al Abeed between Ma'on settlement and Havat Ma'on settlement outpost to at-Tuwani are regularly attacked by Israeli settlers. Because these attacks have come to the attention of Israeli and international media, the Israeli military is supposed to escort the children and ensure their safety. Members of CPT and the Italian peace group, Operation Dove, monitor the military's compliance and issue an annual report of violations impacting the children's education and well-being. See the team's most recent report at

soldiers tried to make me angry
and violent.
But I was so... strong. If we stay
in the way of peace,
I think we will soon
have our freedom.”

Iraq

CPTer Bob Holmes (right) and Mr. Mahmud examine disarmed weapons. Mr Mahmud wants Iran and Turkey to stop U.S.-supported military attacks on civilian villages so he can clear the landmines from the field.

Arke Saru Taban, a nurse living in the Zharawa IDP camp. Find her story on the Iraq team's blog, in English and Kurdish, about the Kurdish villages in Northern Iraq. Includes videos, profiles of courage, stories of strength, photos and more.

<http://cpt-iraq.blogspot.com/>

In the Kurdish north of Iraq, CPT accompanies villagers who have fled their homes in conflicted border regions. Many of these Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), currently living in tent camps under extremely difficult conditions, have tremendous determination and tenacity to return to their communities, preserve village life and regain their dignity as contributing members of Kurdish society.

Team members document human rights violations against civilian populations, and seek to amplify the voices of Kurds calling for a peaceful solution to the Turkish-PKK conflict. (PKK is the Kurdistan Workers Party.)

"With U.S. soldiers gone from population areas, reconciliation is more possible between different factions."

- Hospital Director
Rutba, Western Iraq.

CPTers Peggy Gish and Cliff Kindy, and CPT supporters Weldon Nisly and Shane Claiborne returned for a brief visit to Rutba in January 2010. They wanted to thank the medical personnel who treated wounds they had sustained when their car wrecked in a harrowing trip from Baghdad to Amman on the 10th day of the 2003 U.S. invasion.

"U.S. soldiers have killed hundreds of ordinary people, often shooting them at random...Many see the U.S. presence as attracting terrorism... Others say the violence would escalate if they leave."

- Women NGO leaders, Kirkuk, northern Iraq
